Kyaien O. Conner, PhD, LSW, MPH, will provide a critical assessment of how race, racism and historical trauma have impacted Black Americans and Black families within various systems in the United States. Through this training, we will focus on developing a better understanding of these intersections with a goal of enhancing our cultural awareness, reducing disparities and enhancing your work in the child welfare setting.

Training objectives:

- 1.) Participants will be able to define race, racism and historical trauma.
- 2.) Participants will assess how race-based trauma leads to poor outcomes in the Black community.
- 3.) Participants will discuss the intersections of race-based trauma and child welfare including the behavioral health and criminal justice systems.
- 4.) Participants will evaluate strategies for addressing race-based trauma in the child welfare setting.
